

What to Bring to Alaska

Pack light, dress in layers, and plan for changing weather

Southeast Alaska weather shifts quickly, so layers are your friend. Pack light — you'll be flying home with frozen fish in 50-pound wax boxes, which we recommend checking as luggage. The lodge keeps plenty on hand, so don't overthink it; the essentials are below.

Clothing & layers

- Three pairs of warm pants.
- Two or three sweaters or fleece — zip-up hoodies layer best.
- Three or four T-shirts, a mix of long and short sleeve.
- Thermal underwear for your base layer.
- Plenty of socks. Thin liner socks under a heavier pair work well; remember we wear rubber boots on the boat.
- A waterproof light jacket.
- A water- and wind-resistant layer — ideally one that covers your face and neck.
- Indoor shoes for the lodge. We ask guests to leave outdoor footwear at the door.

What the lodge provides

You're welcome to bring your own, but we've got you covered on the essentials:

- Rain gear — thick, industrial-grade coats and pants. Many guests bring their own high-quality, breathable rain gear; either works.
- Rubber boots for the boat, with boot dryers in every cabin.
- All saltwater fishing gear, bait, and your captain or guide.
- Washer, dryer, and detergent.
- Wireless internet, internet television, and a cellular signal booster inside the lodge.

Personal essentials

- Personal toiletries.
- A camera — with a Ziplock bag or two to keep it dry.
- Sunglasses and sunblock.
- Motion-sickness medication. Patches work best for most folks, but note they require a doctor's prescription.
- Any personal medications you may need — supplies are limited locally.

- Cash for the week. It isn't readily available in Gustavus, so bring what you'd like to have on hand.
- Your fishing license and King Salmon Stamp (see the pre-trip guide for details).

On gratuity

Our captains, chef, and crew put everything into making your week exceptional. Gratuity is entirely at your discretion and always appreciated; for recommended amounts, just ask Josh.

River Fishing

Mid-August through mid-September

If your trip includes freshwater river fishing, a little extra preparation goes a long way:

- Waders and wader boots.
- A backpack to carry your catch out from our remote river locations.
- We keep excellent freshwater spin-cast rods on hand.
- Spinners change from season to season — call Josh for the current hot tip on what's working.

Dietary needs

We're glad to accommodate straightforward dietary needs. For anything highly restrictive or hard to source, please bring extra with you. Most of our perishables come from Juneau and our dried goods are barged in from Seattle — once ordered, items can take two to three weeks to arrive, so a little advance notice helps. Call Josh and we'll do our best to make it work.
